

is aborted before the optimal point is found, considerable time savings can be achieved at the cost of a slightly increased mean squared distance. Note that the good results rely on that the layers are searched according to (15); if the layers are searched according to (13), the convergence is considerably slower.